ARDMORE, FRIDAY, JULY 20

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Editors Ardmoreite:
Gentlemen.—Please announce my name as a candidate for the office of Governor of the Chickasaw Nation at the ensuing election, in August, 1894. I want all that are in favor of an equal division of the land to give me their support. R. L. Bord.

ARE YOU GOING AWAY

During the summer? If so, you should order the Ardmoreite sent to you. Your address will be changed as often as requested.

The address of Hon. R. L. Boyd, progressive candidate for the governorship of the Chickasaw Nation has been received at the Herald office. If what Judge Boyd says is true matters must be in a deplorable condition. The Judge approves of the Dawes proposition and wants the country open.—Denison Herald.

It seems there is never a cessation to sensations. One follows another with the regularity of the coming and going of the seasons. There is always some particular sensation to occupy almost the entire space of the press and give the people something to talk about, and it seems these sensations are growing more frequent every year. This year has been especially crowded with matters that give the public great concern. There was the Breckinridge trial, with its trail of filth; then the tariff question in all its features has been a matter of general concern for almost half a year; General Coxey and his army movement, sprung before the public gaze with the growth of a mushroom; the horrible assassination of the French President is followed by the greatest labor strike in the world's history. So one sensation after another follows in quick succession. In these days of great excitement one may well pause and inquire, what next?

The interest being manifested throughout the Chickasaw Nation in the farmers league movement is most gratifying and speaks well for the Ardmore Board of Trade. It is meeting with some opposition from that pessimistic element which can see no good in anything which did not have its origin either directly from their fertile brains or by their advice and consent. They can use no logical argument against the aim of the movement, hence they resort to imaginary reasons by charging it is a selfish step taken by Ardmore to further personal ambitions. This is notably true of Purcell, Minco and Duncan. In order to rob Ardmore of whatever honor attaches to having taken the initiative in this laudable undertaking to benefit the farmer, the bone and sinew upon which the prosperity of the entire country depends, they will jeopardize the interests of 50,000 non-citizens who have invested their toil and their money in making this country what it is. We, nor the Ardmore Board of Trade, are not wedded to any particular plan to be pursued in giving these people protection any further than out of a multitude of counsel in which all are invited to participate, to formulate the best and most plausible one. If the ideas advanced in the Board of Trade circular don't suit, come with your delegation and show wherein they are not for the b. s. It is no intention, as insinuated by some prejudiced papers, to ignore the Dawes Commission but on the contrary to work in harmony with them in bringing about a plan when by the farmers will, in some way, be fully protected in all their just rights. This is no time for bickerings but for action. Stop your foolishness and do some sensible work, not for Ardmore, but for the entire people of the Chickasaw Nation.

AND IT WASN'T REAL.

But the Young Lady Did Not Know It and There Was a Scene.

Those little patent affairs which are the latest in toydom are destined to create a great deal of excitement along crowded city thoroughfares.

One day last week, for instance, there was a group of male pedestrians gathered in close ranks with craned necks about a fakir on a Chicago street.

A fresh-faced, pretty girl in a big hat and a stylish wrap sauntered jauntily down the street, the embodiment of brave and independent womanhood.

This dainty young woman alighted her way ahead through the crowd and glanced casually at the fakir with a little supercilious smile, which included the group of curious loiterers.

Suddenly the group was agitated and swayed in from the curb, and a small dark object scurried across the pavement.

"O—w!" A distinctly feminine scream smote the circumambient air and the brave young woman, her eyes distended by terror, grabbed at her skirts with both hands and sprang into the middle of the street, recklessly under the very nose of a heroic horse. The heroic driver said something emphatic; the men on the pavement grinned; the fakir dangled his patent gray mouse and expatiated on its resemblance to the real thing, and the young woman made a wide circuit of the fakir's corner and dived into the crowd scurrying down Washington street.

RICH BONDHOLDERS.

Names of These Favorites of Fortune Kept Secret by the Treasury.

The millionaire is commonly represented as engaged in clipping coupons from bonds. This is an egregious error. Rich men, as a rule, do not hold coupon bonds. The reason is quite obvious. Such bonds are not safe property. They are always payable to bearer, like treasury notes. If lost the government will not replace them. Accordingly, for the sake of security, people are constantly exchanging them for registered bonds. Thus the sum total of coupon bonds outstanding, which is now about $70,000,000, is all the time diminishing. They are mostly in the hands of small holders. With the registered bonds it is quite different. They are rich men's property par excellence. At present about $200,000,000 worth of them are held by private individuals. Of this great sum $87,000,000, or not far from one-half, are owned by 1,000 persons, roughly speaking, whose holdings average $80,000. The names of these fortunate individuals are kept secret by the treasury. Some of the fortunes possessed in this shape are enormous. Some of the greatest belong to the Vanderbilts. Old William H. Vanderbilt had $12,000,000 in registered bonds at one time.

W. F. WHITTINGTON'S GRAND SUMMER DISCOUNT SALE IS NOW IN FULL FORCE.

It is customary with me at this season of the year to inaugurate a grand low-priced sale.

I find I am overstocked in everything in the dry goods and gent's furnishing goods line, and have made a grand discount of 25 per cent on everything in my house, and want to give my customers and the public generally the benefit of our low prices.

Remember, everything in the dry goods line goes. I have just received one of the largest stocks of dry goods ever brought to Ardmore, all of the latest designs and patterns.

In our present sale we are much better prepared in variety and assortment than heretofore. Buyers have a chance to choose from a large and almost complete stock. Usually black goods are excluded from discounts, but to make this sale as interesting as possible, I include all of our black goods, thus making it more satisfactory to buyers than a few odds and ends thrown out for an advertising purpose. Come early if you want the best; you will save money by doing so.
